STUDENTS GET A TASTE OF CHEF CAREER

High school students interested in the culinary field visited the Food Hub to explore potential career and educational paths. Many of the students had never worked in a commercial kitchen, so their visit was a valuable opportunity to experience professional cooking, gain the attention of a food chef mentoring volunteer culinary instructor. The visit was made possible through support from Local 15, the program's primary sponsor. We hope to see more students visit our high school partners receiving an excellent program at home.

Students participated in a lesson on ingredients led by Chef Amy Hill who shared her personal journey with the excitement of learning a chef and producing the great food culinary school. The students brought their own produce to the station with staff assistance, including fresh bread from vegetable scraps, and flouring, shaping and finishing after their stay in the kitchen. Our students were eager to return to the Food Hub to volunteer.
